

Reading classroom learning - A springboard for teaching assistants

Everyone supporting learners needs a foundation of understanding about teaching and learning but few TAs have had chance to build frameworks that go beyond personal experience. This workshop focuses on what teaching assistants need to know to read pupil and student learning accurately, use effective interventions in classrooms and make sense of in-school developments. The CUREE based workshop is for people who support CPD for teaching assistants within schools and colleges.

The workshop will:

Focus on how teaching assistants can develop some key skills to support pupil learning and maximise the learning opportunities they receive in school.

- explore approaches to effective questioning to support learning
- how to promoting independent learning through group work
- identify suitable teaching and learning foci for experimentation
- use a variety of tools to scaffold their own professional learning and plan to implement new practice in the classroom

This workshop is designed for:

- Teaching staff who support CPD for teaching assistants within schools and colleges
- It can also be adapted for in-house delivery to teaching assistants

You will learn about:

- Understanding why and how collaboration works for pupils
- Challenging expectations
- Spotting and using different kinds of talk
- Being good at being coached and contributing to other people's learning
- Where to find out more – in class and beyond

The CUREE guarantee

Our facilitators will:

- Make research and evidence accessible and useful focusing on high leverage strategies
- Provide tools to sustain learning and help staff refine strategies in the light of pupil responses
- Introduce learning in a way that is active, engaging and helps with the collection of evidence about staff learning to support the evaluation of impact
