

Sauce for the Goose

This interactive workshop help groups of schools build a research-informed, shared model of learning and teaching that works for both pupils and staff. They also work as a powerful catalyst, as Alison Peacock, Head of the Wroxham Teaching School said following a day with her alliance “as a result of that day the Alliance has exploded into action. The energy it released is fantastic”

The workshop will help you:

- Identify a shared language about learning for pupils, for teachers and leaders
- Build on a firm foundation of evidence about effectiveness – at every level
- Explore ways of evaluating the impact of professional learning in schools and across networks

This workshop is designed for:

- Leaders in networks of schools working together on CPD including teaching school alliances

You will:

- Understand 4 aspects of teaching and learning that make a particular difference for pupils as well as teachers
- Explore high leverage CPD strategies and the skills and capacities that enable schools and groups of schools to build these at scale
- Use effective staff learning strategies to test and plan next steps in the development of your network
- Explore key issues in tracking progress and connecting staff and pupil learning
